

When times
get tough,
it's time to get going...
to your Library.

The price of gas is up. The price of bread, milk, and eggs is up. Unemployment is up. And, so too, is public library use.

Repeated studies have shown that, when dollars shrink and expenses grow, people tend to rely more on their public library for materials and services they might otherwise pay for.

That is certainly true here in Boone County.

In the first three months of 2008, borrowing increased more than 40 percent over just one year ago — an increase of 100,000 books, magazines, movies, and music. During those same three months, 6169 Boone County citizens got a library card and 15,409 children, teens and adults attended library programs.

Haven't been to the library lately? Here are some ways you can save money at the library:

BORROW DON'T BUY

Don't spend $25 on a book you'll read once, borrow it. An audiobook makes your commute more enjoyable — especially when borrowing it saves you $40. Saving money by doing it yourself? Save even more with "how to" books and DVDs from the library.

GET ONLINE

High speed internet access can cost over $40 month. In some areas of Boone County, it isn't available at all. Every branch of the library offers free internet access and computers with Microsoft Office. At Main, Scheben and Florence, you can bring your own laptop and use the free wireless network. No laptop? You can borrow one to use in a study room or any other location in the library.

TAKE A CLASS

Each month, the library offers as many as 40 different programs for adults — from painting to managing your diabetes to setting up your first email account. Not only will the learning keep your brain young, there's compelling evidence that social interaction is important to your overall wellbeing. And it's free.

KEEP UP WITH THE NEWS

The library subscribes to 440 magazines and newspapers — from Aviation Weekly to the Wall Street Journal — so you don't have to. Enjoy the latest issue over a cup of coffee at the library. Older issues of magazines can be borrowed to read at home.

FREE ENTERTAINMENT

Tickets for you and your family to attend a concert, puppet show, or theatrical performance are expensive. On one Friday evening in March, over 400 people came to the library to sing along with the 'Beatles' — for free. Whether it's a local musician, a Kentucky Chautauqua performer, or Madcap Puppet Theatre, count on the library for at least one family activity every month — tickets not required.

HELPING EVERY CHILD SUCCEED

The library offers more than 750 story times each year. During every story time, while your children learn to love books and libraries, you will learn simple and fun ways to help your children acquire the critical skills they need to learn to read and write in school. Over 300 preschool children attend story time in a typical week.

As a partner with Boone County Success by 6® and the Boone County Early Childhood Council, the library helps support the efforts of local preschool and daycare centers to provide the highest quality childcare to Boone County children. Library staff with Kentucky Early Childhood Trainer credentials offer training in early literacy programming. Centers borrow from a collection of more than 30 classroom story and theme kits. The Community Center on Wheels visits 30-45 centers, checking out books and providing story time to over 1200 children each month.

With an extensive collection of books on everything from inventions to Indian tribes, the library supports the curriculum of the county's public, private, and home schools. Each year, more than 1000 elementary students visit the library to get cards and borrow books. For classes that can't visit, the library puts together special collections for extended loan. Last year, the library provided 422 classroom collections.

Over 300 preschool children attend story time with a parent, grandparent or other caregiver in a typical week.

And during those long summer months, weekly programs, family events and the friendly competition of BCPL's Summer Reading Program keep Boone County kids reading.

DELIVERING SERVICES TO YOUR DOOR

BCPL's Homebound Service delivers books, movies, music and a smile to over 400 Boone County residents each month. Some live in their own homes, others in retirement centers, nursing homes, and special needs facilities. Free homebound delivery is available to any Boone County resident unable to visit the library.

DELIVERING SERVICES TO YOUR DESKTOP

WWW.BCPL.ORG delivers a variety of library services directly to your home, office, or handheld computer. Get answers to your questions 24/7 from AskWhyKY — live online help from library professionals. Download books, audiobooks, videos, and music any time night or day. Keep up with what's going on at the library and with your favorite books and authors — subscribe to a library newsletter delivered directly to your email address. Find the full text articles you need for your research paper, business proposal, or personal interest in dozens of specialized online databases.

PRESERVING BOONE COUNTY'S HISTORY AND HERITAGE

Since its beginning, the library has worked to acquire all available material about Boone County's history.

Last year, more than 500 family files from the recently acquired Anne and William Fitzgerald collection and other local families were added to the collection. Through the cooperation of local residents, and with the aid of digital technology, over 1500 privately owned photos, journals, letters, and documents were digitized and are being added to the online collection.

Much of Boone County's history has never been put down on paper — it lives in the memories of its residents. To preserve those memories, the library is developing a collection of personal interviews with people from all walks of Boone County life. 129 oral history interviews, many conducted in the early 1980's, will soon be available in audio and print. Two special projects, when complete, will document the history of Boone County farming to present day and the history of Boone County's early African American families. The library's Oral History Program is the largest among Kentucky's public libraries.

To bring local history into the community, the library has partnered with the City of Walton, Boone County Historic Preservation and Boone County Parks to offer family events such as the Burlington Ghost Walk, Gaines Tavern programs, and county bus tours. Upcoming projects include Petersburg Heritage Day and the Burlington Wayfinder project.
